Demand for Houses.

We bear that there is quite a demand for houses of four or five rooms near the business portion of our city. In view of this fact it seems that those, who own the number of vacant lots to be found so located would consider it a good investment to build such houses and thus supply this demand which must be home on Thursday night last, about nine supplied if our city is to grow as we would o'clock, he was accosted by a white man on

Salor, S. C., Oct. 5, 1892. On last Friday evening about dusk dark, Dr. T. R. McElveen, armed with a Winchester rifle, was comfortably (7) seated in an old oak tree on the West side of Dyal's Bay, awaiting the return of the bear to the spot where it had played such havoc with the corn the night before. After remaining in this posiion about two hours he heard a noise like some heavy body pressing its way through the dense growth near by, and in a few seconds, closely watching in the direction of the noise, he saw emerging from the bay a dark object. It paused a moment and then advanced slowly toward the tree in which he was partially concealed. Cautiously leveling W. Anderson, for the past two weeks ending bis rifle to his shoulder, he fired and down fell the bear (as it proved to be.) Feeling satisfied that the bear was dead or dying, the Doctor descended and walked a few paces toward the bear when to his astonishment, it recovered from the shock, and with a terrific growl, rising on its hind legs, came toward him. He attempted to shoot a again but his rifle failed to fire, and a second attempt with same result. By this time a but the Doctor by retreating a few steps managed to get aim again, and this time felled the bear to the ground, and continued the fire until the hear ceased to move.

Dr. McElveen was all alone, but a neighbor iving about a half-mile off, hearing the rapid firing, suspected the cause, and was soon to his assistance. The bear's hide can be seen at Shilob P. O. by "doubting Thomases." The Doctor, with others, has been back several times since the killing, hoping to get another shot, but so far failed. They, however, heard the other bear, but it did not come in

Mr. Jno. K. McElveen tells us that "while sitting in a tree on Monday night last, watching for the bears, three large raccoons passed in a few feet of the tree he was in, and that he came near firing on them for cubs." Wonderful indeed that he, under the circumstances could distinguish a coon from a cow. Mrs. Gamble, we are glad to report, is con-
